Police records check — consent to obtain personal information

This form is used by the Department of Immigration and Multicultural and Indigenous Affairs (DIMIA) and applicants to assess whether a person is eligible for temporary or permanent residence. Unless statutory obligations require otherwise, the information provided on this form will not be used without your consent for any purpose other than for this assessment.

Police records check

Police records checks are integral to assessing your eligibility. On this form you are asked to disclose whether you are the subject of criminal charge(s), including traffic violation(s), still pending before a Court, or whether you have been the subject of criminal or traffic conviction(s) or finding(s) of guilt before a Court or a traffic violation. You are not required to reveal any conviction(s), which may be protected by part VIIC of the Crimes Act 1914, relating to pardoned, quashed or spent convictions, except where an exclusion applied (see explanation note below).

Unless otherwise advised by DIMIA a police records check is not required for persons under the age of 16 years.

This form should be forwarded by you with a fee of (Australian) $36 direct to the Australian Federal Police (AFP) at

Because the processing time for records checks is 30 days,
DIMIA should not be contacted prior to the expiry of this time limit.
The AFP should not be contacted.

Notification of results of Police records check

Details of the results of the police records check are provided directly to the applicant. Where the check shows that the applicant has a criminal history details will also be sent to DIMIA.

Spent Convictions Scheme

On 30 June 1990, new Commonwealth legislation relating to the collection, use and disclosure of old convictions came into effect. This new law is commonly known as the Spent Conviction Scheme. Its aim is to prevent discrimination on the basis of old convictions, once a waiting period has passed and provided the individual has not re-offended. The Scheme also covers convictions that have been set aside or pardoned.

DIMIA has been granted exclusion from the spent convictions legislation, in that all convictions, findings of guilt and pending matters may be disclosed and may be released to them for the purpose of assessing Migration Act applications.

The Attorney-General, on the recommendation of the Privacy Commissioner, has granted exclusions, both partial and full, from the operation of the Scheme for several categories of entitlements.

Anyone who believes the standards dealing with disclosure and use of old conviction information have been breached may apply to the Privacy Commissioner for an investigation of the matter at

If it is subsequently discovered, for example as a result of a check of police records, that you have provided false or misleading information, you may be assessed as unsuitable to receive the entitlement you seek.

It should be noted that the AFP does not assess your application but only provides the information to DIMIA on your behalf to assist in assessing your suitability to receive the entitlement.

You should also note that the existence of a record does not automatically mean that you will be assessed as being unsuitable to receive an entitlement. Each case will be assessed on its merits, so it is in your interest to provide full and frank details on the form.
